Post In Each of the Four Wards

A field of 13 candidates will seek office in the city democratic primary to be held in Hope Tuesday, November 28, in which candidates will be nominated for the offices of city attorney, city recorder, and one alderman for each of the four wards.

The list of candidates, announced Tuesday, is as follows:
For City Recorder: T. R. Billingsley, and Lawson Glover.

For City Recorder: T. R. Billingsley, seeking a fourth term without opposition.

For Alderman, Ward One: E. P. Young, seeking a third term, will have opposition from A. W. Stubbeman.

For Alderman, Ward Two: L. A. Keith, a fifth term, finds he is opposed by two other candidates, Jesse Brown and Jim Dodson.

For Alderman, Ward Three: Roy Johnson, Thompson Evans and Ross Spears. The incumbent, F. D. Henry, is not a candidate for re-election.

For Alderman, Ward Four: C. E. Cassidy, seeking a third term in office, is opposed by P. B. Carrigan.

Voting precincts for the four wards to be located as follows:
Ward One: Arkansas Bank & Trust company building.

Ward Two: Frisco passenger station.

Ward Three: Magnolia building, across the street from 556 filling station.

Ward Four: City hall.

Martin Removed to Ashdown Hotel

Slayer Who Turned Razor
On Himself Given
Chance to Recover

ASHDOWN, Ark. — Arthur Martin, 40, who fatally slashed his wife's throat and then turned the razor on his own throat, according to Sheriff Jim Sanderson of Little River county, was described as "holding his own well," following his removal here Sunday from his farm home 21 miles east of here.

Sheriff Sanderson is recovering from a serious operation, but his wife said that the attending physician gave Martin "a chance" to recover.

The man is at a local hotel, where he was taken from his home in Little River county, near the Hempstead county line, according to Mrs. Sanderson.

Martin slashed his wife's throat several times during a quarrel over "family trouble," Sheriff Sanderson said he learned, then slashed his own throat. The family came to Little River county from Yantis, Texas, about three weeks ago to pick cotton being employed of the Henry Cotton farm.

Will Higgs, father of Mrs. Martin, returned the body to Yantis Saturday.

Thursday, November 23, Is Nat'l Thanksgiving

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Proclaiming Thursday, November 23, as a day of general Thanksgiving, President Roosevelt asked Tuesday that thanks be offered "for the hope that lie within us of the coming of eventual world peace."

Arkansas will observe Thanksgiving on Thursday, November 30, the original calendar date, which has been retained in Governor Bailey's proclamation. The various states are divided between the new and old dates.

Heart Attack Fatal to C. N. Trimble, 55

Former Hempstead Man
Is Stricken While On Hunting Trip

C. N. Trimble, 55, former Hempstead county man, died at 5:30 p. m. Monday of an heart attack while hunting with his brother, John D. Trimble, at Newellton, La.

Mr. Trimble was born and reared in Hempstead county. He lived at Washington until about 15 years ago when he moved with his family to El Dorado. Surviving are his widow, three sons, J. D. Trimble, C. N. Trimble, Jr., and David Trimble, all of El Dorado; two daughters, Mrs. W. H. Etter, Jr., of Washington, and Mrs. T. C. Wilson of Cotton Valley, La., one grandson and one granddaughter.

Also surviving are two brothers, John D. Trimble of El Dorado, Frank Trimble of Hope; three sisters, Mrs. J. W. Butler of Batesville, Mrs. J. A. Wilson and Miss Bess Trimble, both of Washington.

Funeral services were held at 11 a. m. Tuesday at First Presbyterian church at El Dorado. The body was returned to Washington, this county, for burial in the Washington cemetery at 4 o'clock.

German Sea Chief Noted as a Raider

Admiral Raeder Saw Service in Last Maritime Warfare

By The AP Feature Service
Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, veteran of World war sea battles at Dogger Bank and Jutland, has spent 45 of his 63 years in the German navy. But up until two years ago at least he didn't have a gray hair in his head.

How gray he'll grow in Germany's second struggle against the world's Number One naval power remains to be seen. But it's certain that the serious-faced chief of the German navy knows what he's up against, for he recently told a German youth meeting:

"There is no doubt that a strong fleet, offensively directed, decisively influences war. Every war with a sea power, moreover, will be decided on the seas."

And besides he's had more than a taste of the British fleet in action. No "desk admiral," he helped bombard the British coast in 1914. He rode the North Sea as chief of staff to Admiral von Hipper, whose famous battle-cruiser squadron led the Kaiser's navy into the battle of Jutland.

Nine years after the Germans scuttled their World war fleet at Scapa Flow in 1919, Raeder won his admiral's stripes and rose to the commander-in-chief's job in the German navy. From there this old-line naval officer with out political background or ambition has been drawn into high German councils.

Last April the Fuehrer crowned Raeder's career with the title Grand Admiral, comparable to a Field Marshal in the army, a distinction held before him by few others in German history. Among them was the Kaiser himself, and famed Admiral von Tirpitz, builder of Germany's pre-1914 fleet and author of the last World war submarine campaign.

To Raeder in turn will probably go the credit for fathering Germany's 10,000-ton pocket battleships, finished under his regime. Light and fast, these "panzer" (armored) ships are ideally suited to commerce raiding, on which Raeder is an acknowledged authority.

He holds an honorary doctor's degree for his two-volume "Cruiser Warfare in Foreign Waters," part of an official German World war history. The book recounts exploits of the famed commerce raider Emden and other raiders that sank thousands of tons of allied shipping. Some reports say Germany's pocket battleship Admiral Scheer is now raming the southern seas trying to repeat these exploits.

But despite his big navy name, Raeder has never captured mass imagination in Germany like major political figures such as Goering, Ribbentrop and others. He smiles little in public, makes few speeches, looks

Mussolini Tears Up Cabinet; Italy May Alter Plans

7 Cabinet Seats, Chiefs of Army, Air Force
Reshuffled

ROME, Italy — (AP) — Premier Mussolini reorganized the entire leadership of the Fascist regime Tuesday in a shakeup of cabinet, party and top military posts unprecedented in its sweeping scope.

Seven cabinet ministers, the secretary of the Fascist party, the chiefs of staff of the army, air force, Fascist militia, and four undersecretaries of state, were replaced in a drastic reshuffling.

In addition, Mussolini himself yielded the portfolio for Italian Africa to General Attilio Teruzzi.

Although some observers saw in the shakeup evidences of lessening German influence in Rome, foreign diplomatic circles here generally attributed it to conditions within the Fascist party and government, and considered it without bearing on foreign policy.

Germany Envoy Goes Home
ROME, Italy — (AP) — The German embassy announced Tuesday that Ambassador Hans Georg von Mackensen had returned to Berlin for an "extraordinary reason."

It was said he left Rome Sunday. Further information was withheld.

Germans in France
BERLIN, Germany — (AP) — An official announcement said Tuesday German scouting troops crossed the German-French border to explore the territory in front of the Maginot line.

This was the first announcement of German troops crossing into France. In the first village entered, unidentified by the German announcement, the houses were "carefully entered" but no soldiers or villagers were found.

The announcement said the Germans, undisturbed by enemy gun fire, searched the village and then marched on to a second community, which was also deserted.

Nazis Hit U. S.
BERLIN — (AP) — Criticism of the United States for a "two-fold yardstick" policy in connection with the European war was voiced Monday by the German Foreign Office monthly piece, Deutsche Diplomatische-Politische Korrespondenz, which cited as "symptoms" the case of the City of Flint, American freighter now held by a German prize crew, and the "differential treatment" of armed commercial ships and U-boats by President Roosevelt, with its "dangerous obliteration of the character of war and trade ships."

President Roosevelt at a press conference on October 20 when asked about the possibility of extending to surface vessels of belligerent European nations the restrictions he imposed by proclamation on the use of American ports and territorial waters by their submarines, said he did not think the two were analogous.

Says U. S. Worried
The Foreign Office commentary said the manner of the "snatching up" of the City of Flint affair "points to the fact that responsible officials in America are permitting the case to be pressed more and more into a fixed direction."

"It hardly corresponds to the spirit of impartiality if on the one hand 'a case' is to be constructed for a definite actual purpose at the expense of all possible propaganda methods out of a prize affair which was carried out orderly with strict consideration for the men and goods and which is to be objectively settled before a German prize court."

"When, however, on the other hand

"Torpedo!"

The warning cry rang down from the lookout atop the crow's nest of the O. B. Jennings, 10-289-ton American tanker 200 miles off Chesapeake Bay. Crewmen rushed to the rail, saw the foamy wake tossed back by the torpedo as it shot past through the water.

The message of destruction from the German raider U-140 missed its address. For the moment, the O. B. Jennings was safe. Then, off in the direction from whence came the torpedo, the hull of the U-boat appeared on the surface.

What the mis-aimed torpedo had failed to do, shell fire from the submarine accomplished. A direct hit in the engine room put the motors out of commission and stopped the fleeing ship. Other shells sprayed the deck, killing members of the crew as they scrambled into lifeboats.

The U-140 drew near the sinking vessel and order three of the lifeboats to pull alongside.

"We got you at last," said the sub's second officer. "I knew we would. Where is your captain?"

"He is dead," lied a seaman who sat next to the captain in one of the boats. The captain's clothes had been placed on a steward, killed during the action, to fool the raiders and prevent capture of the vessel's master.

The deception worked and the captain and surviving crew members escaped.

Poor Marksmanship Saves
Shipping
When they missed the O. B. Jennings, it was not the first time the U-140's torpedo gunners had failed to sink a ship with the first shot. Poor marksmanship saved many another ship and kept this raider's toll the smallest of any U-boat to visit American shores.

The U-140 left Kiel, commanded by Korvettenkapitan Kophamel, on June 22, 1918. She shelled several large vessels on her way across the Atlantic, but failed to sink any.

First vessel to fall prey to the bark Ponto, sunk July 26 after prolonged bombing and shelling. First torpedo victim was the 7028-ton Japanese freighter Tokuyama Maru.

After the O. B. Jennings incident, the U-140 sailed southward. Off stormy Cape Hatteras she sent the Diamond Shoals Lightship down into the "grave yard of the Atlantic."

After nearly two months in American waters, supplies and shells were running low on the U-140. She had suffered damage in counter-attack and suffered a slow leak, so headed home Sept. 9. On the way she was given help by the U-117, also homeward bound.

Mine-Laying Sub Hits Fishing
Fleet
The U-117, commanded by Kapitänleutnant Droscher, followed the U-140 out of Germany to achieve more success as a raider. This submarine was the of the cruiser, mine-laying type and her initial mission was to sow mines on the American coast.

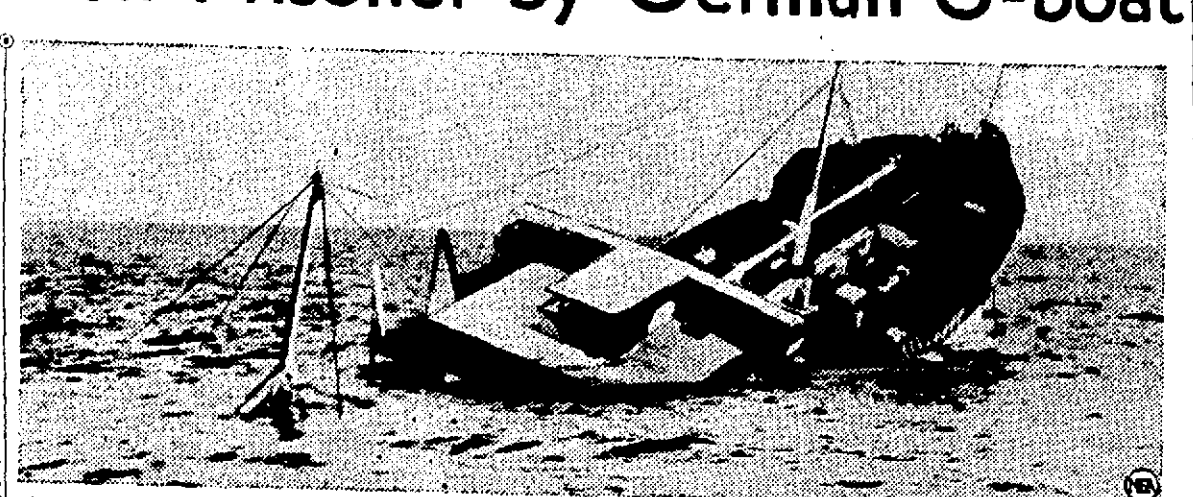

Her sinking of the British steamer Baron Napier on July 26 heralded her approach. Two weeks later, presumably after a period of mine-laying operations, the U-117 appeared in a fishing fleet off the New England coast.

Angered fishermen shook garbled fists and scattered as the raider opened fire. The U-boat's bombs sent nine August 13 the U-117 sent a torpedo into the American steamer Frederick R. Kellogg off New York. Seven of the crew lost their lives, trapped below decks.

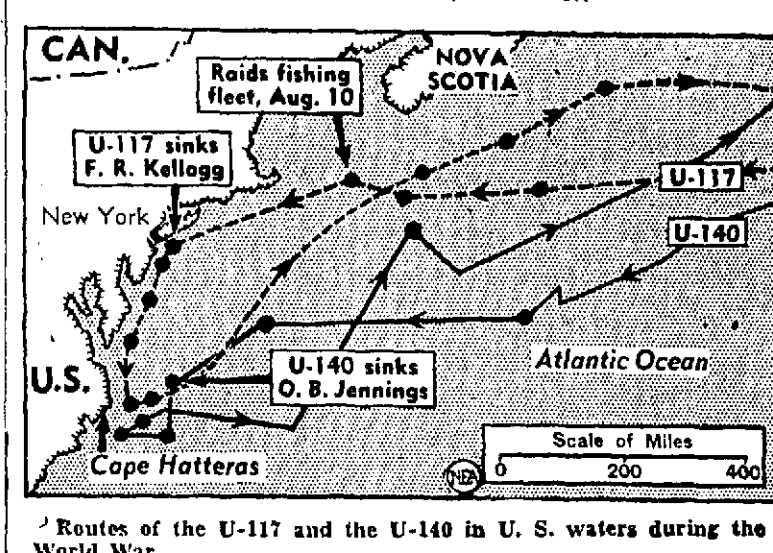

Swedish Craft Unmolested
In the next week, the U-boat raided the coast as far south as Cape Hatteras to sink two Norwegian vessels, another American ship and a Brazilian schooner. One steamer, the Swedish Algerio, the U-117's commander let go unmolested after stopping her with shell fire and questioning the captain.

'Professor Jim' Was An Authority

HARTFORD, Conn. — (AP) — The memory of "Professor Jim" still lives at Trinity college three score years after the old negro janitor's death. Alumni have provided funds for a new stone to mark his grave.

The old, weather-beaten tombstone said merely that James Williams was "for more than 40 years janitor of Trinity college." The new one, President Remsen B. Ogilby says, will commemorate "Professor Jim" as "faithful over a few things."

"Professor Jim," nearly 90 when he died, virtually was a father confessor to the students of his day and the final, undisputed authority on matters of Trinity tradition.

Winnie Judd in Return to Asylum

Prisoner Returns Voluntarily After One Week of Freedom

PHENIX, Ariz. — (AP) — Winnie Ruth Judd returned voluntarily Monday night to Arizona State hospital from which she fled last Tuesday night.

Dr. Louis J. Saxe, superintendent, said her condition was "not very good" mentally and that she was "agitated."

He declined to say where the insane killer had been during nearly a week of freedom.

Mrs. Judd was in a hysterical condition. Dr. Saxe refused to allow anyone to talk to her, and barred photographers.

Deputies of Sheriff Lon Jordan found some of the murderess' personal effects on the hospital grounds during the afternoon. She broke into the home of Mel Larson, hospital engineer on the grounds early tonight to obtain food, and was seen leaving by an attendant. Hospital attendants escorted her into the ward.

Mrs. Judd fled the hospital late last Tuesday night, went to the home of her parents, the Rev. and Mrs. H. J. McKinnell, where she spent about 15 minutes, then vanished. She left a letter to Gov. Bob Jones in which she said she had been "persecuted" and was leaving only to see her parents and her husband, Dr. W. C. Judd. She promised to return if the governor would see that Dr. Saxe "leaves me alone."

Snow News For Today

ALAMOSA, Colo. — (AP) — Snow that fell eight years ago is a handicap to workers in Alamosa.

The snow was a wet one and as it fell it froze on top of ice that was being stored at the Western Railways ice plant. It made a four-inch layer of ice on top of the neatly cut ice blocks.

The greatest demand in years upon the plant's supply diminished it this fall. Workmen finally were digging in to the last layer. It was the one stored eight years ago and covered by the four-inch layer of frozen snow. Workmen had to remove it before they could reach the ice blocks. They found it a hard task.

Charles C. McRae Dead In Houston

Former Hope Man Suc-

Early Tuesday

Charles C. McRae, about 67, formerly of Hope, died at his home in Houston, Texas, at 1 a. m. Tuesday of heart disease. He had been ill several years.

Funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at Houston. Burial will be there.

He is survived by his widow, one son and one daughter of Houston; three sisters, Mrs. Harry Lemley, Mrs. W. K. Lemley and Mrs. E. S. Greening of Hope.

Mr. McRae was the brother of the late R. G. McRae, former president of First National Bank of Hope.

Born at Mt. Holly, Union county, Arkansas, Mr. McRae came to Hope with his parents in 1888. He attended school here, later was graduated from Arkansas college at Batesville and then attended law school.

For the past 30 years, Mr. McRae had been an attorney at Houston.

Contractors Give Big Refund to LSU

Total of $93,432 Refunded
by University Build-

BATON ROUGE, La. — (AP) — Refund of half the excess profits realized on constructing four state college buildings was accepted Monday by the state Board of Education from Summa and Verne Caldwell, brothers who share half interest in the construction firm, Caldwell Bros. & Hart.

The brothers agreed to refund $46,716 in addition to $47,000 already refunded, or $93,432 as their share in the firm's excess profits in construction of a power plant, library and study hall at Louisiana Normal College at Natchitoches and an administration building at Louisiana Polytechnic Institute at Ruston. The Caldwell family considered their partner and half owner in the firm, Monte Hart, liable for the other $30,432.

The board stipulated the acceptance would not waive any criminal action which might be taken by the state, nor would it affect civil or criminal action against Hart, under federal mail fraud conviction in connection with alleged embezzlement from Louisiana State University.

City of Flint Creeping
Down Norwegian Coast

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The United States asked both Britain and Germany Tuesday to avoid any action which would imperil unnecessarily the captive American crew aboard the freighter City of Flint, now somewhere in the blockaded North sea bound for Germany.

While the American request did not ask precautions against any specific action it was learned that the two eventualities most feared by officials are:

1. The German prize crew might blow up the vessel if British warships attempted to capture her.
2. The British might sink the ship.

The Department of State instructed Ambassador Joseph Kennedy in London and Alexander Kirk, charge d'affaires in Berlin, to ask the British and German governments to avoid exposing the American crew to unnecessary danger.

Harry Thomas Accuses
Both Tony Galento and
Max Schmeling

CHICAGO — (AP) — The Illinois State Athletic Commission Monday barred Harry Thomas, Tony Galento, Max Schmeling, Nate Lewis and Joe Jacobs from Illinois ring pending a complete hearing of "fixed fight" charges made by Thomas.

The ruling was announced after the commissioners had discussed the allegations of Thomas, a former heavyweight fighter, that the results of his bouts with Schmeling and Galento "had been decided weeks before the fighters entered the ring."

The members met after Gov. Henry Horner had ordered an inquiry into Thomas's story of his alleged "dives." They said that neither the three fighters nor their managers held licenses in Illinois or had applied for any.

America Is Seen Through New Eyes
 "When I die, I will tell the dead about it."
 It was an incredible, happy old lady speaking—and she was talking about America. She had been brought from her village home in Romania by her son, who had lived in the United States for some time. It was her first visit to this country.

The things she saw and marveled at when she reached this shore were the things most citizens see every day. They were little things, most of them—but all integral parts of a life that is still comparatively rich and free. On a drive through the country, she was struck by the dairy herds on American farms—the unbelievable size of the full udders. Cows are not so productive in her homeland.

To this little lady, America is the most remarkable place in the world. She couldn't get over the fact that she could travel for several hundreds of miles, across state lines, without once showing a passport.

How often do the citizens of this country stop to think what that means? Americans travel thousands of miles across the continent without once being stopped for identification, unless they run afoul of the traffic regulations somewhere.

Americans don't stop often enough to count their blessings. They accept all the details of their lives as part of their heritage. Yet, they are part of American heritage—automobiles, telephones, electric lights, radio, healthy eating, freedom of interstate passage, opportunity to become successful. They belong to America, and the citizens here have become used to them. They have become so much a part of the general acceptance of things that no one ever stops to reflect over them.

"What about the houses?" there aren't any fences around them. And where do the watchdogs stay? Leaving houses unprotected while their owners slept seemed to her like over-reliance on the virtue of humanity. She is learning now that houses don't get robbed in this country—most houses don't, at least.

It might do a lot of people some good to shut their eyes for a moment and open them again—on a new America, a country they never saw before because they were too close to it. Count your blessings, the little ones as well as the big ones. They belong to American life today, but they didn't always. They had to be fought for.

The little old lady from Romania knows all about these blessings, and perhaps she will teach a few veteran Americans a thing or two before she "tells the dead about it."

 Questions on Page One

Discomfort in the lower part of the abdomen, pains in the thighs, and a general sense of pressure are not infrequent during such periods. When ever pain is severe enough to interfere with normal routine a physician should be consulted. Frequently, mental factors are responsible, especially among girls who have received inadequate preparation for the role of womanhood.

When the pain is not severe the use of mild doses of ordinary sedatives is frequently helpful.

Young women often inquire whether they may exercise immediately before, during or right after their regular functions. Most physicians believe that strenuous exercise is to be avoided at such times, but normal activities need not be curtailed. In some instances it has been observed that strenuous exercise at such times is followed later by painful periods.

Physicians are sometimes asked whether it is safe for a girl to take a tub bath or even to go swimming at such times. Many women have tried the experiment without harmful results, but in general it is not considered advisable to take a tub bath for at least the first two days of the cycle.

All sorts of medicines are sold to women to relieve difficulties in connection with the periods. Most doctors believe that the use of simple pain relieving drugs is not harmful. But all doctors naturally condemn the use of habit-forming drugs. Physicians also warn of the dangers that may lie in taking remedies containing amidepyrine or pyrazinone without adequate control. Too many cases have been reported in which women who used such drugs without medical direction had difficulty with the formation of the white blood cells.

The practice of hygiene, including plenty of rest, hot drinks, the use of the hot water bottle and a correct, mental attitude is sufficient to make the cycle uneventful in the vast majority of cases.

"Oh, and you know the Senate usually just makes a formality of appointing his co-chairman. He just lets 'em know who he wants and they do the rest."

Halloween

Without the dark, like folds of erape
Blots every star from sight.
For ghostly form and golden shape
Are all abroad tonight.
The bitter winds in fury howl
Like tortured souls unseen.
As ungs and friends and witches
prowl
Without on Halloween.
Within, how war the fires glow
And Jack-o-lanterns shine.
What happy songs and laughter flow
As goldenly as wine.
For all the quips hiding here
Are those of what has been.
Of old love and fun and cheer
Within, on Halloween.

Money mounting beginning at ten o'clock the Woman's Auxiliary of the First Presbyterian church opened a most interesting program reviewing Dr. Samuel M. Phinney's Glasgow's "Chapel" Mrs. J. Finley Ward, Secretary Assembly's Home Missions, presided and brought as a foreword, a most inspiring devotion using John 3-16, "The Greatest Verse" Mrs. M. C. Butler introduced the book subject "Chapel" and gave a most interesting review of the first chapter, followed by Mrs. C. H. Taylor, who discussed the second chapter, Miss Leann Bayless' review of the third chapter was a very earnest and forceful appeal to the Christian people for the establishment of "chapels." The fourth chapter was reviewed by Mrs. Dorsey McRae followed by Mrs. Dick Watkins, accompanied by Mrs. C. C. McNeill. During the noon hour tempting sandwiches with hot coffee and cookies were served. At one o'clock James Lewis, vocational teacher from the colored high school addressed the Auxiliary using as his subject "Give Us an Opportunity" and presented a quartette of boys from the school in two selections. These boys have won first honors in the State and fourth in the National contests. Mrs. Ruffin White gave a most interesting survey of conditions in Hempstead County, followed by Mrs. J. W. Branch who reviewed the last chapter of this interesting book. Dr. Thomas Brewster closed the meeting with a splendid challenge, "What Can We Do About It?" followed by The Lord's Prayer, "The Greatest Prayer."

1929 Panic Proves Midpoint Between 2 European Wars

Great Depression of 10 Years Ago Started on October 24

"BLACK THURSDAY" Proved by One War, It Proves to Have Led to Another

By FREDERICK GARNER Associated Press Financial Writer

NEW YORK — Wall Street quotation ticks registering the outbreak of the vast organism of business, have ticked off a decade of market response to a swiftly changing world since stocks collapsed on "Black Thursday" in the autumn of 1929. It was October 24, ten years ago, that the stock market most sensitive barometer of the mass feelings known as "business sentiment" shuddered as if in apprehension of coming events, then plunged toward the abyss of depression. It has been the most frantic selling war since the Civil War, a century and a half of trading, a tonnage peak of speculative values topped in times. Vanished in the dust of deflated paper profits and sold-out margin accounts were the golden dreams of a great army of little traders who had been attracted to the market by a five-year advance in share prices.

Stocks had been going down for several weeks, but on the morning of October 24 the decline became a rout. Best Shares Crash Selling orders, coming in large part from distressed margin traders, swamped the market. The ticker fell hopelessly below the market. Some of the best-known shares on the board crashed $10 and $20 off $30 before the selling panic passed.

Frightened by the spectacle, some brokers started agitation to close the exchange. In midst of this atmosphere of unreasoning flight came news that a group of Wall Street's leading bankers had assembled at J. P. Morgan & Co. to discuss the situation. The word went out of the conference there was no need for drastic action.

Fear relaxed its hold, prices rallied suddenly, the market took a more orderly line of retreat.

Dealers expressed all previous records, totaling 12,884,450 shares. It was hours after the closing going with the last quotation was registered. Subsequently, before the autumn crash fully explained itself, volume surpassed the "Black Thursday" total but it never attained again the drama of that day.

Only the Beginning
In retrospect, October 24, 1929, stands out as a starting point. A few faint warning signals of the impending collapse of the post-war order had sounded in the spring and summer of 1929. For the average man they were unrecognizable. But the message of "Black Thursday" was heard far and wide.

A chill settled over the land, despite assurance from business and political leaders that everything was "fundamentally" sound. Industrial hammers, virtually at the peak of post-war prosperity when the market hit the skids, began the waver, then descended.

The market tried a comeback in the spring of 1930. It flapped because business did not follow. Another severe spill took place in the autumn of 1930. Then followed a series of declines, culminating at mid-year in 1932, when only the badly battered stump of the 1929 price list remained.

The whole world felt the cold grip of depression. In 1931 the central European financial crisis system to its roots. The British pound sterling, long regarded as the rock of money security in world finance, fell from its gold standard pedestal.

Political change came swift in train of spreading economic disorder. New government took over, dedicated to reform or aimed to tighten centralized control. Big runs thundered in Shanghai as Japan seized advantage of the economic breakdown to begin its conquest of China. The Nazis took over in Germany. The New Deal swept into power in Washington.

Among the first reform measures pushed by the New Dealers was legislation aimed at preventing another Black Thursday. Banking laws were strengthened to give federal authorities stronger control over credit and, incidentally, over margin speculation in the stock market. The federal reserve board got power to say how much cash the trader must put up to buy stocks on margin.

The currency and exchange commission became the federal cop on the Wall Street beat. Manipulation was outlawed, including pools, which were accused of luring the little fellow into the market by devious methods.

Any person desiring any revision or adjustment of his assessment, or any change in value, for improvements created or removed, or any change whatsoever, may appear before the Board and make application therefor, and same will be considered.

This 20th day of October 1939.

HARRISON IN HOLLYWOOD

Lucille Fairbanks Thinks She'd Make Better School Teacher Than Actress

By PAUL HARRISON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD — Along with several other young Warner players, Lucille Fairbanks made a west coast personal appearance tour recently. It was an uneasy experience for her, especially because she never has appeared in a picture.
During one show a member of the audience called out: "Are you related to Doug Fairbanks?"
"Why—yes," faltered Lucille. "I'm his uncle."
That's an example, though, extreme, of Miss Fairbanks' confusion regarding herself. She doesn't know why anyone hired her, why she went on the tour, or why anyone would want to interview her. She doesn't consider herself especially attractive, nor is she confident of ever learning to act.
Maybe being the elder Doug's niece had something to do with her start. "Something, but not much."
"That was the reason I got my first screen test," she admitted. "But it was so bad that I didn't get a contract. I don't think I should tell you where I made that test, but it wasn't Warner. I got my test here all on my own, without the studio ever knowing of the family connection."
"I always liked school dramas, and when I graduated from U. C. L. A. I went to the Bliss-Hayden Miniature Theater. So one night I was playing the second lead—quite a small part—in 'The Colonel's Lady,' and a Warner scout asked me over for a test."
Holds Degree in Political Science
That's no gag about graduating from the University of Southern California at Los Angeles. Miss Fairbanks has an A. B. in political science.
At first she had decided to be a lawyer, and later she fastened on politics—two vocations which make excellent use of histrionics. She was able to travel a lot and went to two good finishing schools, one in Paris.
"If I don't get anywhere in pictures," she said, "I can easily go back to school for awhile and become a teacher. I look just like a teacher when I put on my hornrimmed glasses and comb my hair straight back."
The self-estimate, intended to be unflattering, isn't quite fair. Miss Fairbanks is what is known as a gorgeous blond. Five feet six inches tall, weighs 120, and has the sort of figure that studio photographers like to delineate with spotlights and deep shadows.
"My legs," said she, sticking out one shapely gam, "used to be rather muscular from too dancing, but I took 'em down with massage and steam baths and exercises and I don't know what-all. I have short muscles that tend to bulge, and that's why I gave up dancing, although I studied one kind and another for eight years. I still can't dance."
As for acting, "I don't know whether I'd like comedy or drama best because I've never done any comedy. The few parts I've had have been heavier, but some were meaty and I liked them. Maybe I hammed them all up, but I got the feeling I was going something."
Nobody Knows Who She Is
The personal appearance tour was an awful shock. Miss Fairbanks pointed out that nobody knew her.
"Why," she said, "I've scarcely had my name in the papers here, except for a couple of little lines saying I was seen at such-and-such a place with so-and-so—and those weren't true. And this is my first interview, so I'm probably saying things shouldn't. She hasn't any special accomplishments; doesn't play the bullfiddle or sing or do needlepoint or collect hand grenades. The ballyhoo boys will remedy that; they may even bolster her ego."
Incidentally, the press agents are getting into the hash again. Here's a nifty from the Kernville location where a new Hopalong Cassidy picture is in the making:
"A flock of buzzards estimated at more than 4000 halted production on 'Gun Chores' for five minutes because their mass flight darkened the sun. This migration of buzzards, according to authorities, establishes a record in California."

Bruce Catton Says:

A. F. of L. Fights to Upset U. S. Building Trades Probe

By BRUCE CATTON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — One of the hottest pressure campaigns of recent years is being staged here to get the Justice Department to soft-pedal its anti-trust drive against building trades unions.

The campaign came out into the light of publicity the other day when high executives of the American Federation of Labor visited President Roosevelt and Attorney General Murphy to try to get the drive shelved. Under the surface it has been going on with even greater vigor and determination. Much of the pressure is coming from Capitol Hill, where the A. F. of L. numbers many friends among congressmen and senators; lawmakers have been calling the Department of Justice on the phone, or going down in person, to urge that the heat be taken off of the building trades.

"Stop Scaring our Boys" — What has stirred Federal leaders and their friends is not the set of indictments obtained from a District of Columbia grand jury against five union officials; it is the fact that the anti-trust division is proceeding in 15 other cities, calling union officials in for questioning and, as one leader expresses it, "scaring our boys so that the unions can't operate."

They are urging that the department confine its efforts to the Washington situation, making a test case out of it and discontinuing proceedings elsewhere.

The Department of Justice, however, is supporting Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold in his policy of forgetting about test cases and going ahead all along the line and all across the country.

Smiles for the C. I. O. Meanwhile, a little counterpressure is beginning to develop. For if the Federation is highly disturbed by the inquiry into building trades union practices, the C. I. O. is highly pleased.

Last spring it announced its own plans to unionize the building trades, setting up the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee to do that job.

If Mr. Arnold's energetic staff should disrupt the tightly-organized A. F. of L. unions this organizing committee's job would be just that much easier. So the C. I. O. is all for continuance of the anti-trust drive.

An extremely interesting point in that connection is the fact that Daniel Tobin, head of the powerful A. F. of L. Teamsters' Union has been one Korrespondenz pointed to recent speeches by President Roosevelt and Secretary of War Woodring in which they said the United States was determined to keep out of war and the United States Senate's action in approving repeal of the embargo act.

From the joy which prevailed in England and France it must be assumed, the commentary added, "that at last the eyes of the Western powers those assurances of the president and his war minister were not to be taken so seriously after all."

"The lifting of the arms embargo," the commentary said, "alone could hardly not be imputed at the same time, that this was only the first stage."

"Even if the attack on the Athena did not immediately lead to the desired goal, there remained—especially since all American journals stand open for English propaganda—always: enough other possibilities to induce the desire second step and, if still necessary, the third step."

"Stimulants" such as the City of Flint "did not exactly discourage such seriously nursed hopes in the West."

Korrespondenz recalled President Roosevelt's statement at Chautauqua, N. Y., on August 14, 1936. That it was a "tragic series of small decisions" which led to the United States' entry into the World War. It concluded that the desire of the American people without doubt is to remain neutral but

1812 Pensioner Knows What It Is and Hates It

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—Mrs. Esther Ann Hill Morgan of Independence, Ore., is the only dependent of an 1812 soldier still drawing a federal pension. At least she is so far as she knows.

Blind as a result of the Civil war and 82 years old, Mrs. Morgan has had kinfolks in most of America's wars. She doesn't want any more relatives to march away. She is sure there is "some way" for America to stay out this time.

Mrs. Morgan's grandfather, Jediah Hill, enlisted at the age of 15 and fought for two years in the Revolution.

Her father, John Hill, who was 71 when she was born, enlisted with three brothers for the War of 1812, and served in the New York militia. The soldiers furnished their own clothing and got no pay. Mrs. Morgan says, while the government furnished guns and ammunition.

Mrs. Morgan had uncles in the Civil war and nephews in the World war, too.

She lost her sight at the age of 7 in an epidemic brought home by soldiers after the Civil war. Some persons afflicted obtained expert attention and recovered their sight, she recalls, but hundreds remained blind. The scourge was called simply "sore eyes."

commerce from the seas and made other vessels cautious. The U-117 found prey hard to find along the coast and headed for European shipping lanes. Here she sank American, Canadian and Norwegian vessels, and shelved her last victim off Nova Scotia on Aug. 30.

The raider joined the leaking U-149 and the pair successfully navigated mined waters of the Skaw and Al-Buck Bay approaches to the Baltic. Just as she reached the German coast, the U-117 ran out of fuel oil and had to be towed in.

German Sea Chief

serious and determined. Nevertheless those who know him say he's warm, friendly, with a keen sense of humor.

The son of a government official, he was born almost in sight of the sea at Hamburg.

About 5 feet 8, stocky, clean-shaven, with dark brown hair, he always wears a winged collar with his navy blue dress uniform. Raeder is married, has a son in his teens and a married daughter.

Hal: "What do three balls in front to a pawn shop mean?"
Jim: "Two to one you don't get it back."
